

"What can I say, TutorShip was fantastic. I would recommend it to anyone, good information, great teachers, good friends and great times" Former student - BHP Billiton Marketing BV

*"I chose TutorShip, the Institute's distance learning course, because I wanted assistance and direction, to be able to ask questions and to understand what level I was working at. Handing in essays and receiving marks and comments meant that I knew throughout the course the areas that I was struggling with and therefore needed to concentrate on. Having a tutor responding and encouraging me helped keep me motivated and on track.
My TutorShip experience was invaluable in helping me study and pass my exams"* Former student - MSC (UK)

How does TutorShip work?

After enrollment, the student will receive a package, either from London or from their local Institute Teaching Centre (ITC), depending on where they are in the world, including the latest course book of the subject being studied and the TutorShip workbook.

The workbooks are divided into sections. Each contains a number of questions relating to corresponding sections of the course book.

TutorShip students achieve better results on average compared to self-study

The student can be assisted through each of these steps by their tutor to whom they send assignments for feedback. There is a mock examination as the final preparation for the exams.

The TutorShip course draws the student's attention to how broad and complex shipping is. The questions on each chapter compel students to successfully investigate the text and illustrations in the course book to arrive at the correct answer. In turn, the assignment reassures the tutor that the student has a decent grasp of the subject. And when all the questions and assignments have been completed, the mock examination confirms that this exam preparation course has been a success.
